

EXECUTIVE SUMMARY

As part of its ongoing commitment to invest significantly in helping member clubs become more sustainable and thrive, Scottish Rugby continues its delivery of the Club Sustainability Fund (CSF) for Revenue, Capital and Major Capital Investment projects.

All three strands of the CSF may be available to clubs with a successful track record of working/investing in their community to increase the quantity and quality of rugby participation amongst boys, girls, men and women. Such clubs may apply for funding to improve key revenue generation, upgrade their facilities and improve the quality, capacity and longevity of rugby participation.

The Revenue strand of the Club Sustainability Fund (CSF) provides funding for club sustainability projects targeting increased playing and non-playing membership, operating efficiency, sponsorship, business partnerships and the involvement of local businesses in the club and seeks to support those applications that deliver the greatest impact against the aims and objectives set out in this document. Member clubs can apply for up to £10,000 through the Revenue strand of the CSF.

The Capital strands of the CSF are for capital expenditure only. Scottish Rugby define capital expenditure as expenditure on the purchase, upgrade or construction of an asset. This includes any costs directly incurred in the process such as: Architect fees, Quantity Surveyor and Engineers' fees and Solicitor's fees in respect of planning, building warrant asset purchases or leases.

Member clubs can apply for up to £50,000 through the Capital strand of the CSF and up to £250,000 through the Major Capital Investment programme. Both strands seek to engage club environments proposing projects which offer an enhancement to existing activities which demonstrate exceptional impact on rugby development in their local community.

The CSF programme asks clubs to demonstrate minimum commitment to the total project cost. These vary across the three strands and clubs should familiarise themselves with these as outlined in the document. Applicants should take time to read over this guidance document and related Application Form before deciding to submit an application and should, in the first instance, contact their respective Scottish Rugby Regional Manager for guidance, consideration and inputs prior to making an application.
